Russell's Store and Bar
Valley Lee

c. 1903

Russell's Store and Bar is significant as an example of one of the many small general stores which have traditionally served both a commercial and social function for St. Mary's County's crossroad communities. Today, the owners of these stores, which generally include a back room bar, find it difficult to survive. Russell's, located on a site previously known as "Hobb's Corner," has served the Valley Lee area since the early 1900s. Notably, a bar has always been operated in conjunction with the store.

Louis Springer purchased 50 acres of "Bennett's Delight" from the heirs of Mary Ridgell in 1903. Here he funded construction of both a store and a dwelling house. Harrison Hobbs, Springer's son-in-law, purchased the property in 1924 and operated the store until the 1940s. The Russell family, who bought the store and house lot in 1947, continue to conduct business here today.

Russell's Store and Bar is located on the southeast corner of Route 244 and McKays Beach Road in the Valley Lee district of St. Mary's County. The store consists of a gable roof main block which has been enlarged over the years by a series of additions. A modern brick ranch-style dwelling house and an older two-story frame dwelling house are located to the north of the store. A parking lot extends to the east of the store. The store faces south with the gable roof of the main block oriented on a north/south axis.

Built in the early 1900s, Russell's Store and Bar is a one-story, frame building sheathed with artificial siding. Some of the original vertical board siding is visible on the south gable end. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles. The foundation was not visible.

The south (main) elevation consists of a center door flanked by a one-over-one sash window to the west and a pair of two-over-two sash windows to the east. A shed roof porch supported by square posts extends across the south facade. The porch floor is a cement pad. The eave of this gable end is pierced by a louvered vent. A one-story wing extends to the east. Built by the current owners, this wing originally housed "Triggie's Beauty Shop." The wing is pierced by one two-over-two sash window and a picture window flanked by two-over-two sash windows. A one-story wing extends to the west of the main block. This wing, expanded by the current owners, houses the bar. The bar wing is pierced by an entrance door sheltered by an enclosed gable roof portico. A diamond pane window lights the bar area.

The west elevation of the bar wing is pierced by an entrance door and two two-light windows. The eave of this gable end elevation is pierced by a louvered vent.

The north elevation of the main block is pierced by a door and a window. The bar wing is blind, but a cinderblock chimney stands against the exterior wall. A shed roof addition, used for storage, extends from the east wing.

The east elevation of the beauty parlor wing is pierced by a door and one two-over-two sash window. The eave of this gable end elevation is pierced by a louvered vent.

The interior of the store is one large room with wood floors. Shelves and refrigerator units hold the store's stock of general goods. The bar is accessible from the interior of the store by means of two door openings through the west wall. The east wall of the bar is furnished with a bar and bar stools. Pool tables and a few tables ar.

Louis Springer purchased 50 acres of "Bennett's Delight" from the heirs of Mary Ridgell in 1903. Here he funded construction of both a store and a dwelling house. The house was almost always occupied by successive owners of the store. Lumber for the construction of these buildings probably came from the saw mills owned by Springer.

Harrison Hobbs, Springer's son-in-law, purchased the property in 1924. Hobbs operated the store and lived in the nearby dwelling house. Apparently, the Hobbs family used an upstairs room in the house for distilling alcohol. A large ring in the center of one of the bedroom floors is all that remains of the small family distillery.

Notably, a bar has always been operated in conjunction with the store. The bar did not cease operation during Prohibition. Leo Springer noted that every Friday and Saturday night, local farmers would go to the store "for a loaf of bread," meaning that they would spend the evening socializing and playing cards. In place of cash, which was scarce, land was sometimes bet on a card game. It is said that several farms changed hands as a result.

When the Russell family purchased the property in 1947, the bar consisted of four bar stools, a wood stove, and a table for card playing. The store carried a wide variety of items as it does today, including a great deal of feed and grain which is no longer in demand. Customers would stop by the store once a week to pick up their groceries and on Friday and Saturday nights the bar would be packed with card players. Slot machines, a ubiquitous feature of St. Mary's County life for much of the chairs are located in the center of the bar room.

The old house located on the north side of the store building is a two-story, frame structure which faces west. Contemporary with the earliest section of the store, a kitchen and bathroom addition were constructed in the 1940s by W. Bailey Russell. Russell also enclosed the back porch. The house suffered a fire in 1986 and is now sheathed with a combination of vinyl siding and weatherboard. The roof is covered with pressed metal shingles.

The west (main) elevation has a replacement center door flanked on either side by a one-over-one sash window. A porch extends across the full width of the west elevation first floor. The porch is supported by turned posts with decorative sawn brackets. It retains a tongue-in-groove wood floor and wainscoted ceiling. The second floor of the house is pierced by one two-over-two sash window and one eight-over-eight sash window. A former window opening on the second floor is now enclosed. Two cross gables break the roofline of the house. One of these is pierced by a louvered vent while the other is lit by a diamond pane window. A one-story, shed roof addition, dating to the 1940s, extends to the south of the main block. This addition is lit by a one-over-one sash window on the west side.

The south elevation of the main block is obscured on the first floor by a one-story, shed roof addition. This addition is pierced by a door, a picture window, and a one-over-one sash window. An exterior cinderblock chimney stands next to the exterior wall of the addition. The second floor of the house is lit by one one-over-one sash window and a pair of single light windows. An interior brick chimney pierces the roof ridgeline of this gable end.

The east elevation of the addition is lit by a one-over-one sash window. The first floor of the main block is covered by an enclosed porch pierced by modern window openings. The second floor is lit by a one-over-one sash window and a three-light window. The roofline is broken by two cross gables. One of these is pierced by a single-light window.

The north elevation is lit by two one-over-one sash windows on the first floor. The second floor is pierced by a door and one two-over-two sash window. The door opens onto a modern frame exterior stair and deck. The medium roof overhang of this elevation is finished with decoratively sawn rafter feet.

The interior was not seen.

One outbuilding stands on the property. This gable roofed structure, used for storage, is located in the southeast corner of the house lot.

twentieth century, were also located in the bar.

The Russells added onto the store, constructing wings on both the east and west elevations. Mr. Russell also added onto the dwelling house, which had been divided to serve as a duplex by the 1940s. A portion of the house, which is in the process of being rehabilitated, continues to be rented out to a tenant.

Although business is slower than it once was, Russell's Store and Bar continues to serve as a vibrant local landmark. Perhaps the store's most regular customers are the local men from St. George's Island, Tall Timbers, and Piney Point who meet at the store between 5:00 and 5:30 every morning for coffee. Mostly retired people, they usually converse for a few hours in the bar. Throughout the day the store is frequented by men and women in search of various grocery items, cigarettes, and lunch. Pool, cards, and horseshoes continue to attract clientele to the bar in the evening.
