Summary Description:

The Katcef Site (also known as the J. Beck Site or the Pigeon House Site) is a multi-component prehistoric site: the archeological remnants of a series of overlapping base camps with occupations from the Paleoindian to Late Woodland time periods. The site is situated on an expansive terrace overlooking the Patuxent River near Crofton in Anne Arundel County, Maryland. Katcef was originally recorded by MHT as two individual archeological sites, 18AN57 and 18AN58, in 1970. Subsequent work at both sites and in the area in-between led to the realization that it is actually one continuous site situated along the large river terrace. Subsequent practice has been to consider both 18AN57 and 18AN58 to be simply the "Katcef Site". The surrounding environment is characterized as a mild, temperate climate with mixed deciduous and coniferous growth. The soils are largely Galestown loamy sands.

For additional data on the "Katcef Site", see the synopsis report for 18AN57.
